Market risk is a risk of investments declining in value because of economic developments or other events that affect the entire market. As a result of market risk, the Client may suffer losses due to the overall adverse price movement in the securities market or in a certain segment thereof. Adverse price movement may be caused, for instance, by poor economic indicators of the relevant state or branch of the economy, unstable economic environment, or unstable securities market.

By entering into a transaction with a UCITS ETF following the services provided by Admirals, you will have entered into an agreement that by providing you with details of the websites below, Admirals has complied with any obligation to provide you with KIIDs for such UCITS ETFs. You undertake the responsibility to contact the relevant ETF issuer prior to acquiring any interest in a UCITS ETF where KIIDs are not available on the websites stated.
